There is not a little quiet talk in Wash-There is not a little quiet talk in Washmgton about a certain black bottle that is said to be somewhere within easy reach of the executive office at the White House.
I heard a story yesterday about it. Senstor Edmunds, so the talk goes, had called on the President about some matter of ousiness. He had transacted the matter that brought him there and had stopped For Sale by retail druggists. Be sure the McLane's Pills you buy are made at Pittsburgh, Pa. The coun-terfeits are made at St. Louis, Mo. hat brought him there and had stopped or a moment to talk with Mr. Cleveland for a moment to talk with Mr. Cleveland when he said, with a siy look around the room: "They say, Mr. President, that you keep a bottle of excellent stuff. I do not discover it." The President's quick reply, with a nod of his head to one corner of the the room, was: "It's right in that cupboard, Mr. Senator. Help yourself. The sugar is alongside the bottle." BROWN'S IRON BITTERS RE

Merchant Traceler.

The doctor came, and in due course Johnson was called in to see the little stranger. When he entered the room he looked inexpressibly anxious, half hope, half fear, and, turning to the doctor, said in suppressed excitement: "Is it a boy?" "Ah—um—" hesitated the doctor; "ah, I believe not;" for he knew what the father's hope had painted. "What! not a boy?" said the parent of five girls; "not a boy?" well, I'll be dad blasted if it ain't too bad." "Oh, no," meekly interrupted Mrs.

I from her couch in the corner; "oh, no; you have a printed guarantee on every Well, I'll be dad blasted if it aim't too bad." "Oh, no," meekly interrupted Mrs. J. from her couch in the corner; "oh, no; don't say that, deaf, for the next five may be all boys." This was too much, and Johnson left the house and tried to bribe a street car driver to run over him and cut him in two.

A Puzzling Question.

Boston Record.

The average small boy of the present day is seldom at a loss for something to say, even in the most embarrassing situations. Bobby, a precocious youth of six summers, had been indulging in profanity, and in order to escape the punishment for which his mother had been making preparations, he crawled under a barn and regardings, he crawled under a barn and rearations, he crawled under a barn and re arations, he crawled under a barn and re-mained there in a state of siege for the greater part of an afternoon. When his father returned at night and learned how matters stood he made his way with much difficulty under the barn in search of the boy. "Hello, pa," said Bobby cheerfully, as his sire approached; "you been swear-ing too?" ing too?

Inspired by a School Girl.

One of Longfellow's sweetest short poems grew out of the gift of a pen by a school girl whom the poet addresses as "beautiful Helen of Maine." The pen "beautiful Helen of Maine." The pen was made of a plece of the chain which bound the prisoner of Chillon and a fragment of the frigate Constitution, while precious stones from Ceylon, Siberia and Maine were inset. The "beautiful Helen" is the daughter of Dr. A. C. Hamiin, now prominent in the list of candidates for the Maine Governorship. On her mother's side the young lady is a granddaughter of the late Judge Cutting, of the Maine Supreme Court. preme Court.

A Cat Story.

"Did you ever see a trained cat?" asked Mike Connor, of Philadelphia, as he stroked a little black feline that stood on the bar of his saloon at the corner of Thirty-eighth and Market streets on Satur-

"Tom," he continued, removing his hand from the cat, "you look sick." The little animal dropped down on its side and stretched out its legs as though suffering great pain.

"Poor puss, I'm afraid you're going to die." The lega became rigid, the eyes closed, and to all appearances the cat was dead.

the cat was on its legs, its back arched every hair on end.

"Look for 'em," and the little animal dashed back and forth on the bar like a black comet. At another word of command it stopped short and its trainer produced a long keen-edged butcher knife. Holding the edge toward puss he said: "Now, see if the knife is sharp."

The cat sat up on its haunches and atretching out one paw it passed it gently down the keen edge of the blade. It then examined the blade with both paws, while the little black head was cocked off at one side and almost a human look of intelligence shone from its snapping eyes. Mike is a Democrat and so is the cat. The former placed a Republican newspaper at one end of the bar, and asked puss if it would like to read the news. 'I do not like to take pills if I can avoid it," we often hear persons say, "because they constipate me so," now the "Pellets" never do this. They are so gentle and mild that their effect is almost precially similar to a natural poyament of precisely similar to a natural movement of the bowels, and no unpleasant effects are left behind.
